Building Camp
only for women in the House of Change

03/03/2019 – 16/03/2019

women*

 illustrates that gender is a varied array of diverse gender realities, corporealities and ways of expression. »women*« not only means cis-women, who's gender identity matches their at birth assigned sex.
The purpose of the * is to include gender identities that are being perceived female.

The House of Change in Heinersdorf, about 60 km east of Berlin, was inititiated by cultural workers, artists, political activists, change consultants and researchers.
In the former vocational school, a place of encounter and life in solidarity is being created on 3000 square metres in 60 rooms. The house will serve as a bridge between town and country and at the same time bring together different social areas. The plans include open workshops, a seminar and guest house, a multi-generational housing project, a library, a culture café and much more. The house should be open for impulses, initiatives and encounters of the inhabitants of the village and the whole region.

Our common ground:

A life beyond the exploitation of resources and people, which is not designed at the expense of others but solidary, ecological and sustainable, is possible. In a region like this, it is important to show that racism and retreat to private life can not be the right path. With positive alternatives and lived utopias.

The program for 2019 includes ecological building and living, anti-imperialism, women*s empowerment, models of intergenerational collaboration, precautionary economics and much more. We work non-commercial, mainly in voluntary work and for this construction camp in collaboration with the Bauorden.

This spring, volunteers and experts will transform a room into a seminar room (consisting of restoring windows, painting and installing flooring). We'll also build beds and benches and create the permaculture garden.

On the 8th of March we will celebrate and strike together!
